

Wheel throwing? You can try it at the Hub, Oct. 13

Lexi Baines / The Citizen
October 8, 2014 12:00 AM

Take a trip to the Clay Hub to try out pottery. Photograph By Jill Thompson

Mud. Get your hands in it as the Clay Hub at Cowichan Station opens officially Monday, Oct. 13.

Classes in wheel throwing and hand building, as well as additional workshops and open studio times are all part of the plan for this special studio, located at the 100 year-old, partly renovated, Cowichan Station School.

It's now a non-profit, community-run centre called The Hub, run by the Cowichan Station Area Association.

All ages, from preschool on up, can access programs. All skill levels are welcome, too.

To realize a long-held dream, six professional, local potters went into partnership with the CSAA almost three years ago.

Grants and donations have transformed the space available into a surprising studio.

Courses starting in October include wheel throwing for beginners with Hilary Huntley and hand building and fun with colour with Franziska Ditter.

There are also one-day workshops like Buttons, Buttons, Buttons! and Christmas ornaments. There will also be open studio time. The Hub is located at 2375 Koksilah Rd.

Contact Huntley or Ditter at clayhubcollective@gmail.com for times, prices and more information on the new studio.

© Cowichan Valley Citizen